

Craig Webb – Dream Analyst/Author/Researcher

Craig Sim Webb is a Speaker/Author/Researcher on dreams, applied psychology and consciousness, as well as a physicist and biomedical inventor. His life path was set in motion three decades ago when he nearly drowned on a rafting trip, and then suddenly began recalling up to 10 dreams/day and having powerful lucid and vision dreams. A McGill University graduate with pioneering dream research at Stanford University and Montreal's Sacré-Coeur Hospital, he has designed personal development and biofeedback tools with worldwide distribution, trained for a decade in communications and conflict resolution, and helped found/produce Making Contact (a well-respected international radio show that has aired weekly on 150-250 stations since 1995).

With the aim of sharing empowering, practical information, techniques, and skills, Mr. Webb has had the honor to be an invited expert for major motion pictures, Fortune 500 corporations, various universities, and well over a thousand international media (BBC, ABC, CBS, NBC, Discovery, PBS, NPR, etc.) He has led hundreds of training programs and over 1500 miles of transformational outdoor quests with a refreshing style that blends science, soul, heart and humor. It's been his privilege to empower CEO's, world-class athletes, top celebrities, best-selling authors, and many others, helping them make profound breakthroughs while having plenty of fun in the process.
